How Complete Is Your Map of Mom's Support?

Twelve quick questions about what the family knows and has written down. At the end: what you know, what's still unclear, and what to ask.

Answer yes, no or not sure. This checks how complete the family's picture is. It doesn't measure Mom or the people who help her, and no answer here says whether her arrangement is enough or needs anything added.

1. Is there a written list of everyone who helps Mom in an ordinary week and what each one does, down to the evening phone call?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

2. Has Mom looked over that list and said, in her own words, what's missing or wrong?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

3. For each line on the list, do you know who it came from and roughly when?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

4. Do you know which tasks only one person does today?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

5. For each of those tasks, do you know who else knows how to do it?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

6. Have you written down every backup arrangement the family mentions, even in passing?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

7. Has each person named as a backup been asked, and is their answer written down?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

8. Are the family's open questions about Mom's week written down in one place?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

9. Have you kept the questions about today separate from the ones about what might come up later?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

10. Have you set apart any question about her health or her medications as one for a professional?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

11. Does each open question have the name of someone who will follow it up?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

12. Has the family agreed what would make you look at the list again?

○ Yes ○ No ○ Not sure

QUESTIONS TO CLARIFY

What this doesn't do

It counts what the family knows and has written down, not how Mom is doing or whether her arrangement is enough. A low count means only that some things haven't been asked or put on paper yet, and there's no clock on any of them.
